

Specialty Product Destruction

Properly discard sensitive or proprietary materials that reach beyond digital and paper documents.

Specialty Shredding

Any items that contain confidential or proprietary information and should be considered for secure disposal to help prevent theft or fraud.

These items include unsold or defective clothing, unwanted first responder uniforms, empty medication containers, expired credit cards, old employee badges, and more.

How Specialty Products are Destroyed

Depending on the items and your location, Shred-it®, a Stericycle Solution, offers both shredding and incineration in select markets. Disposing products in an unsecured manner potentially puts a business or brand at risk if obtained by criminals, a competitor, or the public.

Below are three reasons to consider having your discarded products destroyed rather than placing them in an unsecure dumpster:

Brand Protection

By destroying unused products, a business can help prevent them from being sold or used in unauthorized channels.

Limited Liability

Product destruction can prevent recalled or defective products from re-entering the marketplace, which could potentially put the original company in unintended monetary or legal trouble.

Protected Proprietary Information

Secure destruction can also help impede competitor access to prototypes and other confidential product information.

How Shred-it® Can Help

Similar to document and hard drive destruction services, Shred-it® uses certain security protocols for specialty destruction.

Products are picked up by a trained representative, transported on GPS-equipped fleets, and stored on an interim basis in a monitored Shred-it® facility. When ready, Shred-it® personnel accompany the materials to third-party incineration facilities for destruction.

Interested in specialty destruction services? Visit www.una.com/shred-it to learn more.

CONTRACT #SV2473

